A. Emergence and Development of Tea Culture in China

Tea in China was first found to have drinkable characteristics by people in the Bashu area, till the Shang Dynasty, most people have a clear understanding of tea, tea is gradually known to more and more people and applied to life. The Tang Dynasty was a period when Chinese tea culture began to sprout and formed a complete concept of tea culture. Yu LU, known as the "tea sage", wrote a book called Tea Classics, which recorded a variety of knowledge related to tea, and took tea drinking as an activity of cultivating artistic sentiment. Tea Classics not only introduced tea tasting skills to the world, but also carried forward tea culture as an ideological concept. In this period, a true tea culture emerged and was formed in China.

B. The Rise and Prosperity of Chinese Tea Culture

After the development of tea culture in the Tang Dynasty, tea culture was accepted by the ordinary people with a crazy momentum. Especially in the Song Dynasty, the cognition of tea was not only limited to the application of tea techniques, but also taking tea as a cultural activity. Through the study, we can easily find that the prosperity of tea culture in Song Dynasty is mainly attributed to two points: Firstly, the tea culture gains popularity in the imperial palace and secondly, folk tea culture began to become increasingly rich. In particular, tea quality appreciation began to rise, which is an important part of the Song Dynasty tea cultural activities. It is precisely because of this, people have a clear distinction between tea varieties, quality standards, so that tea culture has achieved an outstanding development. Till the Yuan Dynasty, tea culture has already formed a set of mature standards of tasting, and people set more and more detailed standards about tea category, and began to develop a variety of drinking techniques. Since the founding of the People's Republic of China, tea has got a chance for better development; along with our inheritance of traditional culture, tea culture has been raised to a new height. Nowadays, tea has been widely recognized in the world, and more and more people begin to accept this drink.

C. Main Connotations of Tea Culture

The tea culture that we are talking about can be interpreted in both broad and narrow sense. In a broad sense, tea culture refers to all the spiritual aspects of tea-related activities. In a narrow sense, tea culture refers to the tea techniques we use when tasting tea or the related tea knowledge, such as: Tea tasting techniques, tea poems, etc.

Secondly, the development of tourism industry will inevitably lead to the development of related industrial chains, which can promote the development of local economy and cultural exchanges as a whole. The market demand under the tourism industry is extremely huge. Moreover, the development mode of combination tea culture and tourism industry is in line with the overall trend of the current tourism groups, and the tourism concept advocated by tea culture coincides with the tourism development direction advocated by the state to inherit and promote traditional culture.

We should vigorously improve the local tourism resources and integrate tea culture into tourism resources. Tea fairs, exhibitions and other forms can be used to allow visitors to accept the culture of the existing market products and at the same time have a sense of identity, through which we can develop a large number of tea culture-related emerging industries. Tea culture is the essence of Chinese traditional culture. While appreciating and accepting tea culture, it can not only enhance tourists’ tourism experience, but also improve people’s spiritual realm, which has a great role in promoting the construction of local spiritual civilization.

The development of urban leisure tourism and tea-related industries is ultimately measured by the standard of economic efficiency. It is very urgent to increase the economic benefits of local tourism industry; While combining urban leisure tourism with tea culture, we should also pay attention to the promotion of tea industry, which can improve the development scale of tea-related industries and better integrate with our urban leisure tourism. It can also expand the service scope and service quality of urban leisure tourism, thereby expanding the market and obtaining higher economic benefits.

But there are still some problems in the combination of tea culture and urban leisure tourism, Tea and tourism belong to different industries, which will inevitably lead to management loopholes and inadequate supervision by government departments, which requires government departments to strengthen the supervision of the local tourism industry and provide a better competitive environment for its development.

From the current situation, many of our city leisure tourism is still found to adopt traditional mode of development such as collect fees from tourists, sell souvenirs and others, and the development mode of integrating cultural elements into urban leisure tourism is the top priority of our current work, in order to achieve economic expansion of the tourism industry. The combination of tea culture and tourism industry has been highly recognized by many units, and a series of measures have been implemented to speed up the combination of tea culture and urban leisure tourism. In view of the current development needs of the industry, we urgently need to enhance the cultural level, which can be achieved by improving the construction of cultural service system; For example: Construction of tea culture learning center, ancient tea horse road sightseeing and so on; We can also integrate tea culture into our service system and combine it with the current tourism-related industries so that tourists can enjoy the service and feel the strong tea culture atmosphere. Then our tourism model will be transformed into cultural experience type, which will strengthen the tourists’ sense of experience from the perspective of tourists’ humanistic concern. The development of tourism industry drives the development of related industry chain, to promote the local economic development and cultural exchange as a whole, and stimulate the market demand under the tourism industry, which is the combined development mode of our tea culture and urban leisure tourism.

C. Guarantee the Effective Combination of Tea Culture Experience and Urban Leisure Tourism

The development of tourism industry will inevitably lead to the development of related industrial chains, which can promote the development of local economy and cultural exchanges as a whole. The market demand under the tourism industry is extremely huge. It is also very important to maintain the development mode of combining tea culture with urban leisure tourism. We can pay attention to the tea lovers, so as to promote and increase the attractiveness of urban leisure tourism. Moreover, tea lovers can lay a good market foundation for the tea and tourism industry so as to facilitate our future development. Also, the market development is an important link, and we should advocate more and more people to accept and recognize tea culture, so as to enhance the development potential of the market. Only under the stimulation of economic benefits, tea culture and urban leisure tourism can have a stronger combination; we can reasonably and scientifically promote the integrated development of tea culture and urban leisure tourism, to achieve the healthy and rapid development of new tourism.
