Analysis on Path Dependence Theory

Path dependence refers to economic, social or technology such as system once in a path, will be under the action of inertial self-reinforcing unceasingly, and locking in a particular path. Path dependence theory was first made by the United States economic historian Paul a. David, after w. Brian Arthur and Douglas North scholars such as development, widely used in political science, sociology, economics, management and other disciplines, and become an important theoretical understanding of social and economic system evolution [8].

Path dependence theory in the countries have realistic significance in the process of the economic system transformation. Economy is a major transformation process of institutional change, the process has the characteristics of path dependence. First, the choice of the initial system provides strengthening stimulation and inertia of the existing system, because the original system change path and established the direction forward, the more convenient than another path to some; Second, a system form, have a vested interest in the existing system can be formed pressure group, to consolidate the existing system, hinder the further change, even if the new system is more efficient than the existing system. Even if for some reason to accept further reform, will strive to make the change to consolidate and expand their vested interests. Reform success depends not only on the subjective desire of the reformers and the established target schema, and depends on the start of the selected path. Therefore, made any decision, a reform should not only consider the is going to take direct effect of decision-making, the long effect; Reform to study at any time if be not the correct path, if found the path deviation to take measures to correct as soon as possible, back to the correct track, in order to avoid the legacy of conditions.

In practice training of socialist core values of college students, the choice of the path must be doubly cautious. To seriously study the feasibility and scientific nature of original path, and changes in view of the current student development and characteristics of body and mind to make timely adjustment and innovation. Otherwise, it is easier for colleges and universities to carry out the core values into a path choice dislocation, path information, the wrong layer interaction of the actual effect is not obvious in the cultivation of the core values.

(1) Path integration and innovation. Path dependence is a scientific frontier problem, enrich the understanding of the objective world development evolution law. Path dependence on the discovery of scientific theory, guiding people to practice by blind become conscious, by the unconscious conscious. System to develop, must always pay attention to look at the routing problem, must carry out integration and innovation. Integration is to put some scattered in some way to connect with each other, so as to realize the resource sharing and collaborative work of system, main essence is the scattered elements together, and eventually form a valuable efficient as a whole. Innovation is the innovation under the limit, the possibility of path innovation has a broad development space. Integration and innovation can be mainly from three aspects, highly integrated the advantage of cultivating path the main body of socialist core values, in-depth excavation of socialist core values cultivating path object resources, vigorously promoting the socialist core values to foster the generation of path integration.

College students to know, love is the identity of socialist core values, the dialectical unification process, generally go through three stages: cognitive identity, master the core values of theory knowledge, understand the historical process of the formation of the core values, grasp the cultural essence of core values contained; Emotion recognition, is the intermediate links, which forms a connecting link between the preceding values identity is deepening, cognitive identity and behavior identity emotional foundation; Behavior identity, the core values as a code of conduct and guidelines, and commitment to the implementation.

As a special social group, college students have higher cultural quality, are the important force to promote the development of social progress. To strengthen the socialist core values education has important theoretical significance and practical significance for college students to enter society effectively achieve their personal value and social value.
