In the 1960s, the United States first proposed the concept of "Community Information Service (CIS)", which mainly refers to a kind of service provided by the library to the society in the "Poverty Alleviation Program". Since then, the western libraries in the UK have realized the importance of community information services, and have carried out various forms of information services, and have used computers to store, transfer and retrieve community information. The British Library Association in the early 80s of last century wrote a report entitled "Community Information Services: What libraries can do?,” the report, "Community Information Service is to help individuals or groups to solve day-to-day problems, participation in the democratic process of service “The libraries of universities in the United States and other countries have been opening the door to community readers and providing a variety of information services to social groups and individuals.

Article 21 of the General Rules for Academic Libraries (Amendment) of the Rules of Library of Colleges and Universities promulgated by the Ministry of Education of China in February 2002 stipulates that "qualified academic libraries shall be open to the readers of society and the community as far as possible". Article 10 of the "Beijing Library Regulations" stipulates: "The city encourages schools, scientific research institutions and social organizations, enterprises, institutions of library (room) open to the community." In June 2006 the Beijing Municipal Education Commission for The city library information resources to meet the needs of the school teaching and research under the circumstances, should be open to the public. In the future, Beijing will encourage the university libraries to open to the society. The first is to support the conditional university libraries to serve the communities and streets. The second is to solve the problem of borrowing in the library; it will work with the relevant industries or enterprises, to provide them with information services and technical advice. "Government and industry advocacy, prompting our university libraries in-depth study of this problem and gradually put into practice.

2 The necessity of the social service of university library

International and domestic relevant departments of the library services are related to the description and requirements. In 1975, IFLA held a seminar on library functions in Lyon, France. The library's social functions include four aspects: preservation of human cultural heritage, social education, scientific intelligence and intellectual resources development. China's Ministry of Education issued in 2002, "General College Library Rules" (Amendment) Article 21 provides that "the conditions of higher education institutions should be open to the community as possible readers and readers, to provide community-oriented literature and information And technical advisory services, according to the consumption of materials and services or the actual results of services to collect the appropriate benefits."University library collection of a wealth of literature resources and scientific and technological achievements, its educational and social functions determine the inevitable role of university libraries to serve the community, through the service to fulfill their own nature and functions.

The provision of social services can promote the university library and service object win-win situation. By providing services to the society, university libraries can provide rich information resources and services for the clients, and contribute their own strength to the local economic and social development. At the same time, through the service, the university library can expand its influence, attract the social forces to support the construction, and can get the feedback information in a wider range, supplement the information resources in a timely and targeted manner, optimize the library structure, promote the library of the building. As the university library for social services, local will also give more funds and policy support, the library will also be bound to promote their own construction, improvement and development, and ultimately achieve the win-win situation.

From the national reading situation, our country's public reading rate is not optimistic, the public reading rate is declining year by year, which has a certain relationship with the imbalance between the number of libraries and population in our country. If the university library is not open for the public to provide services, the community can use less number of libraries. Compared to IFLA's requirement of a large library every 4 Kms, the western region of China has a library every 30 km to 100 km, far from satisfying the needs of the public for spiritual and cultural life. Therefore, the need for universal reading forces college libraries to carry out social services.

Constructing a learning society is one of the inevitable trends in today's society. An important infrastructure for building a learning society is to provide learning places and resources for all citizens. As a preservation center of literature and information, the library is bound to assume the responsibility of providing the public with the important task of document information resources. Therefore, the public is increasingly dependent on the library, which not only requires colleges and universities to break the wall to the community, and the university library should open the door to the service for the community, for the majority of readers, so as to achieve real resource sharing.
