Introduction

Sadness is thought to be an emotional response to external events such as separation, loss and failure. Due to factors such as individual evaluation standard, the personality traits of different, the same event or situation can cause the strength of the grief, sorrow, sorrow for the duration of will also be different [1]. Levenson, the core of the emotional theory, grief was initially triggered by prototype events, but in the case, when the prototype event meet the lose (loss) of condition, the result will be a sad mood [2]. The emotional process theory (Gross) suggests that the sad experience is the result of the emotional cues that are rated [3]. Xiaoming Jia and [4] say that grief is a very sad experience and a process of repair after death and loss.

Death is not the misfortune of the dead, but the misfortune of the living. Therefore, the grief counseling of the living can effectively unsettle the sadness of the living and avoid the health problems.

Xiajiang Zheng and others believe that "grief counseling is a psychological rehabilitation process for the grieving person" [5].

In the theory of grief counseling, Worden believes that the ultimate goal of grief counseling is to assist the living in completing the unfinished business and saying goodbye to the deceased. Specific goals for the mourning mission include: (1) increasing the sense of reality of loss; (2) to assist the parties in dealing with expressed or latent emotions; (3) assisting the parties in overcoming the obstacles in the process of adaptation; (4) encourage the parties to bid farewell to the deceased. In a healthy way, you can refocus your emotions in a new relationship and continue to live effectively in [6].

Hypnosis is using the suggested method to make patients into a special state of consciousness, control in patients with psychosomatic activities, so as to lift and psychosomatic problems for the treatment of patients with psychological therapy [7]. According to the relevant theory, the consultant has conducted effective psychological intervention for a female college student and has achieved good results.

Case and Method

Case Basics. Visitor A, female, 22, junior, from the countryside. Mother died of illness a year ago. Family member: have two younger sister a younger brother, younger sister already married, elder sister and younger brother all go out to work, economic poverty. No genetic history of the family, no history of mental illness.
My mother died on the first afternoon of my first day of winter vacation. The visitor was very sad about her mother's death, and when she spoke of her mother's death, she was crying and describing her feelings of guilt. I think I hated my mother because of the bad and silly things left by her cerebral thrombosis before her mother died. However, since her mother died, she was always guilty of not treating her mother well. Now the heart is in anguish. Keep back to the previous life, hope that my mother still alive, sometimes when I think of mom will shed tears, hope I can put things right in life now, but always feel do not good, feel every day is not happy, sad.

Evaluation of Visitors. The visitor suffered a great deal of trauma after his death. Visitors suppress their emotions and live in a deep sense of self-blame and guilt, which leads to sleep and reduced learning efficiency. But the visitors the process of cognition, emotion and meaning is unified, for their own psychological problems have self-knowledge, and take the initiative to seek treatment, no logic of chaos, the abnormal sense perception, no psychiatric symptoms such as hallucinations, delusions, so can eliminate mental illness.

Visitors, although there are also depressed mood, this is because the real event, and the degree of light, no suicide, not seriously affect its social function and logical thinking, so it can eliminate depressive neurosis. Visitors also have anxiety symptom, but also did not seriously affect the social function and logical thinking, psychological conflict not deformation, no generalization, so it can eliminate anxiety neurosis.

According to visitor's emotional reaction is relatively strong, content of generalization, have very good self-knowledge and checking, combined with the basic information of the visitors, according to the above-mentioned evaluation, consider the visitor belongs to post-traumatic stress disorder.

Consultation Process. According to the problem of visitors, mainly USES the humanism concept in the process of consultation, combines the technique of hypnosis therapy, the patient treated correctly "lost", out of the shadow of her mother's death.

as sad as he used to be. At the same time, I can focus on the present life and be able to actively face the learning life. It is satisfactory to the present state, and basically meets the expectation effect of the consultation.

Discussion
In traditional Chinese culture, people are used to suppressing their emotions, such as "a man's tears and not a light bullet" and "the ability to turn grief into strength". Think that crying is a sign of cowardice, and the individual needs to hide his sadness well. In fact, in the face of loss, the individual needs time to deal with his feelings. If it is not handled well, it may further damage individual growth and development.

First, a proper release is an effective way to help visitors get out of mourning. In consulting, the consultant will be visitors repressed sad emotion and thoughts bear out for relatives, can effectively reduce the number of visitors to depression and anxiety, help visitors out of the haze, as soon as possible a happy life.

Secondly, the popularization of psychological knowledge is very important. Because the prevalence of psychological literacy is still low, many traumatized people don't have enough awareness to find resources to help. Because the visitor is in high school, study the psychology course, the psychology counselling acceptance is higher. The younger siblings of the visitors, by contrast, have the same trauma but adjust themselves for a variety of reasons. Therefore, it is very important to popularize the knowledge of psychology, such as mass media.

Finally, because the psychological counselling and treatment is a very professional job, not only need long-term regular school education, also need to continue education and clinical supervision, otherwise it may cause serious harm to the service object. There may also be an absence of full training in the practice of consulting outpatient services in the formal medical establishment. It is suggested that the psychological consultation organization should train the professionals regularly, improve the technical level of the counselors, and better serve the public.
