Industry surveys in Asia showed that potential holiday-makers now take into account the presence of spa facilities in hotels and resorts when choosing holiday destination. Currently, the changing profile of spa-goers, spas as a centres for healing and nourishing the body, mind and soul has been growing steadily.

In Asia, people go to spas for fitness and beauty, releasing stress by having body massage seeking peace of mind, pleasure, wellness and health, and other reasons [3]. The key industry trends observed by spa owner and manager included Indonesia showed demand by clients for holistic spa treatment (22%), variety of treatment packages offered by spas (20%), and clients were preferring product with natural ingredients in their treatments (11%) [4]. Basically, Indonesian spa provides natural ingredient cosmetics. There are nine types of spa in Indonesia, two of which are more popular than the other seven spas. They are Balinese massage using Balinese Boreh and Javanese massage using Javanese Lulur. This situation opens a challenge and opportunity to develop the nine heritage spa, especially the Sharia spa, for tourism in Indonesia. Bali is, in fact, more popular as the tourists’ destination than Indonesia.

Along with the globalization, the integration of the Muslim world with the international tourism industry could be extended to other industries (e.g., food, education, and health) by increasing the export of halal items and services that are produced and served on the basis of Islamic law to Muslim countries. Consequently, Muslims would be able to identify the global awareness of halal items [5].
