Abstract—The study aims to describe the meaning of mu`min and kāfir in the Qur`an and its implications for Islamic education. The study method uses the thematic digital Qur`an approach. The study found that, the meaning of mu`min and kāfir refers to the main character of a person. If he is characteristically obedient to God, he is a mu`min (believer). On the contrary, if he has the character of disobeying against God’s main command, then he is a kāfir (infidel). So far many Muslims have been wrong. They claim every Muslim is automatically mu`min while everyone outside of Islam is an infidel. Even those who radically accuse Muslims of being outside of the mainstream as infidels too. So, it could be a Muslim who rejects the main commandment of the Prophet sentenced as an infidel by God while an Ahl al-Kitāb assessed as a mu`min. The implication is that religious education needs to be done to build true faith and religious tolerance.

Keywords—religious tolerance; mu`min; kāfir; thematic digital Qur`an

I. INTRODUCTION

The term kāfir (infidel) is the opposites of mu`min (believer) and Muslim [1]. Who are the believers and who are the infidels? Muslim students tend to view Muslims as mu`min while adherents of non-Muslim religions as kāfir. The results of the research in 2018, from a sample of 150UPI students, over one third responden refer to adherents of religions outside Islam as infidels. Over one third responden argue that they can call it an infidel; and less than one third responden seemed unable to judge whether they were all infidels or they are some of them believed [2]. The other research, from a sample of 190UPI students, more than half rejected the madhhb Shia. A quarter are neutral and another quarter accept this madhhb [3]. Because of these, various rejections and violence against religion other and minority madhhab often occur in Indonesia. Began a massive demonstration against Ahok as a candidate for governor of DKI Jakarta until burn churches in many places and Buddhist temples in Sumatra lately. Likewise, the violence against the minority Shiites and Ahmadis happened massively. In 2010, the Shiites near the city of Kuala Lumpur (Malaysia) were attacked by the masses [4]. In 2011, they expelled Shia people in Sampang Madura. Mosques, pesantren (traditional Islamic education institutions) and their homes were burned down by the masses [5]. Also in this year, the Ahmadiya in Pandeglang Banten (Indonesia) were driven out by the mob, and they burned their homes.

Why do students think so? Their views are thus allegedly influenced by the writings on Google and social media which lately are massive mentioning non-Muslims, Ahmadiya, and Shia as kāfir. But the blog nu.or.id mentions that there are among the Ahl al-Kitāb who are straight, humble, prostrate at night, and do amar makrif nahyi munkar during the day [6]. These writings are of course influenced by the Qur`anic Tafsir which tent view non-Muslims as infidels. The reason is that non-Muslims reject the apostolate of the Prophet Muhammad [7]. It standardizes this view in the classical laws of the Islamic state that divide citizens into Muslims and dhimma (the kafir who the state protects them). It knows the non-Muslims in the Fiqh as infidels. The implication is that the dhimma are minority citizens whose rights are different from those of Muslims. Such discriminatory legislation is caused by his view of non-Muslims as infidels. Sheikh Yusuf al-Qaradawi in 2010 developed a new fiqh that is justist where Muslims and non-Muslims have the same civil and political rights [8]. Previously Sheikh Muhammad Abdullah and Sheikh Muhammad Rashid Rida argued that the Ahl al-Kitāb basically have faith in Allah and the earlier Prophets [9]. It must be distinguished between Muslims, infidels, and non-Muslims [10]. The Indonesian state officially recognizes the existence of the world’s major religions. This shows that Islam in Indonesia supports the existence of religions [11]. That is, if there are Muslim groups that discriminate against other religions this is an aberration. To judge which view is more appropriate, it is necessary to refer directly to the Qur`an, who are the mu`min and kāfir according to the Qur`an? What are their characteristics?

II. METHOD

Study of the characteristics of people who mu`min and kāfir using the thematic digital Qur`an method. For Indonesian researchers, install the digital Qur`an ver 3.1 complete with its translation in English and Indonesian [12]. The object of research is the verses of the Qur`an which describe the characteristics of mu`min and kāfir. The verses are analyzed by using a five-column table: Sequence number, (Quran: Surah ..., verses ...., Translation of the Qur`an, message of verses, and temporary conclusions. The first column just needs to write No. 1, 2, 3, etc.; the second column lives write the verse number of the Qur`an/the translation quoted, the third column copies the selected verse (from the Qur`an digital program); the fourth column, arranges the verse message from the Qur`an... translation; and the fifth column, composes sentences that are easier to understand from the message of verse. It takes conclusions (general) about the meaning or characteristics of a term from all temporary conclusions [13]. So, conclusions (general) about the characteristics of mu`min and kāfir are taken from all temporary conclusions (column five).

III. RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

A. The Meaning and Characteristic of Mu`min

The word of mu`min (faith/believer) with all its derivatives is 589 items (about 589 verses). But the expression of faith in the Qur'an is mostly related to the commandments and prohibitions for believers, as well as praise for believers. The meaning of faith can be clearly identified after recognizing the characteristics of believers in the Qur'an. By using the digital thematic digital Qur'an approach, the characteristics of the faiths are in table 1.

From some conclusions while in the table above can be concluded the characteristics of people who faith as follows:

31). Thus the most important characteristic of faith is to obey the Messenger of Allah;

- Ma`rifat billah (Quran: Surah Al Imran, 3: Ayat 179), namely knowing the substance of God whose name is Allah. Therefore, if God whose name is Allah is called his heart trembles, and if God's verses are read out, his faith is strengthened (Quran: Surah Al Anfal, 8: Ayat 2);

- Believe in His Angels, His Books, and His Apostles. They did not discriminate between an Apostle and another Apostle, and they said: "We heard and we obeyed" (to the Messenger)! and believe in the Last Day (Quran: Surah Al Baqarah, 2: Ayat 285; AnNisa, 4: Ayat 136);

- Establishing prayer with khusy\`a (constantly staring at God), keep away from words and disgraceful deeds, paying zakat, keeping his cock, except to his wife, and maintain orders and promises (Quran: Surah Al Mu`minun, 23: Ayat 1-11);

- Among the Ahl al-Kit\`ab (the People of the Book) there are also those who faith (Quran: Surah Al Imran, 3: Ayat 113-114).

B. The Meaning and Characteristic of Kāfir

The word infidel with all its derivatives is 439 items (about 439 verses). However, the expression of faith in the Qur`an is mostly related to threats to unbelievers, the prohibition on acting and behaving like the unbelievers, the prohibition of obeying the unbelievers, the command to abstain from disbelief, the prohibition of making pagans as guards and helpers by leaving believers, and the need to be aware of the deceit of the unbelievers. The kāfir meaning can be clearly known after recognizing the characteristics of those who disbelieve in the Qur`an. By using the thematic digital Qur`an approach, the characteristics of infidels are in table 2.

From some conclusions while in the table above can be concluded the characteristics of people who kāfir as follows:

- Refusing to obey Allah (Quran: Surah Albaqarah, 2: Ayat 34; Ali Imran, 3: Ayat 32), in the sense of rejecting His commands and prohibitions;
- Arrogant, feeling himself better than the Messenger of Allah, finally refused the Messenger (Quran: Surah Albaqarah, 2: Ayat 34; Ali Imran, 3: Ayat 32; Shad, 38: Ayat 2), even denier and kill the Apostle (Quran: Surah Ali Imran, 3: Ayat 21, 32; 54/Al-Qamar: 3), either to kill their person or teachings, because it is more obedient to his lust (Quran: Surah Alqamar, 54: Ayat 3);
- Looking at the world as the beautiful life (Quran: Surah Albaqarah, 2: Ayat 212);
- Obstructing humans from the path of Allah (Quran: Surah Anisa, 4: Ayat 167; Alfanal, 8: Ayat 36); Doubting and debasing the Qur’an (Quran: Surah Al-an’am, 6: Ayat 25; Alhajj, 22: Ayat 55);
- Therefore, there is no need to invite unbelievers to faith (Quran: Surah Albaqarah, 2: Ayat 6).

C. Discussion

The meaning of faith is addressed to people who obey God, in the sense of obeying His commands and prohibitions. The core of faith is knowing the Lord (ma’rifatullah) and being willing to obey the Messenger. While the pagan meaning is rejecting God, in the sense of rejecting His commands and prohibitions. The pagan core is arrogant. That is, feeling better than the Apostle. As a result, he refused the Apostle, began to deny him until kill him, either his person (their self) or his teachings.

The question is, are the criteria of mu’min and kāfir attached to adherents of certain religions? Certainly not. People of any religion and from any school can believe and can also be infidels. However, adherents of Islam are more potential to faith. Even people from the Ahl al-Kitāb (adherents of religions) can also believe.

Can adherents of non-Islamic religions be accused of being infidels? Absolutely not. Unbelievers can come from adherents of religions outside of Islam and can also be from Islam if there are signs of disbelief in them (rejecting God, arrogant, feeling himself better than the Apostle, more obedient to his passions, and doubting the Qur’an). This view is in line with several great scholars and the results of previous studies. The adherents of the book (Ahl al-Kitāb) are basically believers, namely believing in the previous Prophets [14]. Those who believe and do good deeds, even though they are non-Muslims, are mu’min. An example of a non-Muslim as a believer is Descartes [10], Nurcholis Madjid, Muslim scholars, states they have the right to heaven [15]. Harun Nasution, Muslim scholars, exemplifies Mother Theresia as an expert on heaven. So, if someone has the characteristics of faith, regardless of religion (Islam, Christianity, Hinduism, Buddhism, etc.), then they are categorized as believers. Likewise, if someone has characteristics of disbelief, whatever their religion (Islam or non-Muslim) it can categorize them as infidels. However, we must not sentence someone as an infidel because of this verdict as God’s prerogative. However, if someone does not have the characteristics of faith and there are no characteristics of disbelief, then he is not a mu’min or a kāfir. The more appropriate term for them is as a jahiliyyah (laity people) [16]. The bad result of seeing non-Muslims as infidels is to impose the dominance of the truth of Islam. This is absolutely not true. Allah in several verses continuously reminded His Messenger that his duty is just to convey the message and that he has no authority over people to force them to embrace Islam; and also declared that there is no compulsion in the religion, therefore people should embrace the faith of their choice. Moreover, Allah enjoins Muslims to co-operate and interact with people of other faiths in good things and in fear of Allah, meaning in obedience of Allah. Despite of the misunderstanding between Muslims and non-Muslims and the bad things done to Muslims by nonMuslims previously; Muslims should not oppress non-Muslims and infringe on their rights, to the contrary, they should treat them with justice and avail to them their rights and opportunities. At the same time, Allah declared that he does not prohibit Muslims from doing good to non-Muslims who are not fighting or oppressing Muslims because Islam is treating people with justice and being kind and humble [17].

IV. Conclusion

Mu’min (faith, believer) and kāfir (infidel) cannot be related to adherents of a religion or madhhab (schools). If someone believes in Allah, in the sense of obeying His commands and prohibitions, then that person is a mu’min. The core of faith is knowing the Lord (ma’rifatullah) and being willing to obey the Messenger. While the kāfir meaning is rejecting God, in the sense of rejecting His commands and prohibitions. The kāfir core is arrogant. That is, feeling better than the Apostle. As a result, he rejected the Apostle, began to deny him until kill him, either his person (his self) or his teachings. If someone has kāfir characteristics, then that person, whether Muslim or other than Islam, they can be called infidels.
A devout Muslim is more likely to be faith. However, even Ahl al-Kitāb can also be faith. As for humans in general, it is more appropriate to be called Jahiliyah (laity, not believers and not infidels). The decision for them is up to God. Humans cannot accuse someone of being an infidel, because a pagan verdict is only God’s authority. We must strengthen faith. However, in social life, we must build a religious life that is peaceful, moderate and tolerant.
